

from "BURNT NORTON" -Thomas St. Eliot

Time present and time past

Are both perhaps present in time future

And time future contained in time past

It would be difficult to express in a clearer way the connection which exists between past, present and future.

If all time is eternally present

All time is unredeemable